

Dear Reader,

We all hail from different stages of this short, dreadful time on earth, but if you consider yourself to be in your prime, you may wish to spend those peak years of your life doing something other than pouring over a bookish budget burden at a boorishly bizarre bazaar.

It is indeed strange enough that you would not believe it if I detailed to you the half of it. If you decide to continue, you'll need to factor in details that are conspicuously consumptive, including overpriced produce, oppressive cultural icons, birds no longer of paradise, and a scream that will haunt your soon to be burgeoning career in art curation.

I am duty bound to my obligation of bringing you the accounting of the figures which make up the terrible tragedy of this Get A Clue adventure. You, however, have no such duty. I suggest you spend the rest of your best days observing rather happier purchases like ice cream on the beach or times table flashcards for your newly number-crunching nephew.

With all due respect,

Lemony Snicket

Veblen Hall

Veblen Hall is the finest place to seek and purchase the extraordinary. As we do operate under an exceptional model, please familiarize yourself with our procedures before you enter the event hall. As a courtesy to all of our very fashionable discerning guests, we ask that you not bring orphans into the venue space. And as always, watch out for walls, you may not wish to run into them.

Auction House Rules

- ▶ Mixed art lots may be broken and bought as partial sets.
- ▶ Each piece you buy multiplies your total cost. If you have not yet bought a piece during the event, your total cost is one dollar.
- ▶ Artists have the same price for all of their pieces

We look forward to offering you the finest things money can buy.
